

RASHISM IS A CANCER TUMOR FOR THE WHOLE HUMANITY

Unit number "Z"

The fact that there is a kinship between communism and fascism has long been noticed. The classic of the world philosophy, Carl Jaspers, described the states created by the Nazis and Communists as criminal and those that could not be reformed. They can only be eliminated. Nazi Germany was liquidated in 1945. Four decades later, the modernization of one of the most terrible regimes on the planet, the communist one, began. In August 1991, this process led to a formal ban on the Communist Party, but the regime remained not liquidated. Party functionaries, the elite nomenklatura, ordinary members of the C.P.S.U. transformed themselves without much effort into nationalists and chauvinists of all colors and shades, fascists and democrats, and so on. The "deep people" appeared before the civilized world in all its degenerate "beauty". "Fascism is a stage reached after communism turned out to be an illusion" (Peter Drucker, American scientist, one of the most influential management theorists of the XX century).

Communist ideologues liked to point to the criminal ideology of the fascism. Meanwhile, at its ideological origins looms the sinister figure of S. Nechayev with his "Catechism of the Revolutionary", which preached a complete rejection of any moral norms in order to overcome the illusory goal – communism. And there were Khalturin, Kalyaev, Zhelyabov, Perovskaya, Zasulich... These murderers-terrorists were the predecessors of the Bolshevik-Fascists with their immoral misanthropic ideology.

Early in his party career, the Italian Duke Mussolini noted that "Bolshevism was reborn as Slavic fascism."

In 1925, the Russian philosopher Nikolai Berdyaev, thinking of Eurasianism as primarily an emotional direction rather than an intellectual one, came to the conclusion that as a result, "this kind of mental formation could turn into the Russian fascism."

In 1926, the famous Ukrainian writer Volodymyr Vynnychenko wrote: "Fascism hatches from the Bolshevik red egg in front of our eyes. You can already see all the hallmarks of it. " Around the same time, the Russian politician and ardent chauvinist Vasily Shulgin came to an almost similar conclusion: "In fact, in Russia they (the Bolsheviks – O.R.), seeing that there is nothing more to plunder, are trying to return to the conditions of the old world. And because they succeed, they turn from a criminal bastard into fascists ... "

A well-known caption to a photo from the Fascist magazine, published by the General Staff of the Russian Fascists in the United States (1934), depicts the leaders of the Russian Fascist Party among the children of their allies: "Party Leaders Among the Fascist Children." That's right - "among the fascist children"!

In 1934, addressing to the leadership of the USSR, the Nobel laureate in physiology and medicine, the Russian academician Ivan Pavlov said: "You are sowing in the cultural world not a revolution, but fascism with a great success. There was no fascism before your revolution. <...> All other governments do not want to see in themselves what we had and have <...> and you use terror and violence. <...> Thus, under your indirect influence, fascism will gradually spread to the entire cultural world, excluding the powerful Anglo-Saxon division.

G. Rausching, the Nazi president of the Danzig Senate, Hitler's favorite to whom the Führer revealed his innermost thoughts, published his second book under the title "Conversations with Hitler" in Zurich in 1940 after fleeing to Switzerland. The Nazi №1 spoke as openly as possible to his ally: "In general, there is more unifying than divisive between us and the Bolsheviks. A real National Socialist will never emerge from a petty-bourgeois Social Democrat and a trade union bonza, and a communist will always emerge."

National Socialism is often presented as a variety and synonym of fascism, although there is some difference between these ideologies. Wikipedia means fascism as a form of the political regime, as well as radical authoritarian imperialist political ideology, characterized by a strong cult of personality, militarism, totalitarianism, imperialism and the idea of unity, mobilization of nation and state against enemies, the idea of the constant war and domination. In 1995, the famous Italian philosopher and writer Umberto Eco cited 14 signs of fascism. The Modern Russian society fully meets them.

This is not surprising. "Russia is the most nationalist country in the world, a country of unprecedented excesses of nationalism, oppression of subordinate nationalities, Russification, a country of national boasting ..." (Nikolai Berdyaev).

"It seems to me that the most striking feature of the Moscow's national character is cruelty ..." (Maxim Gorky, Russian writer).

The predictions of many sober-minded scholars and politicians came true: Stalinist Bolshevism-Fascism was transformed into the outright Putin's fascism, into the aggressive Russian Z-Racism.

In 1993, historian Alexander Yanov wrote in the Moscow weekly "Novoye Vremya": "Sooner or later the evolution of the country (Russia – O.R.) into the fascism may be inevitable. And the dream of the Russian democracy will be buried again, for the second time in our century. "

Even then, the scientist had a bleak prospect: "Yeltsin's enemies from the camp of the Russian revanchism are [people] no less openly than Hitler despise all Western values. These people are proud of their cooperation with Saddam Hussein and the European fascists. Few of them will stop at nuclear blackmail if they get behind the wheel. "

At the helm was Vladimir Putin, who decided to scare the world – he ordered to transfer "the deterrent forces of the Russian army in a special regime"...

"Due to the specifics of the dual, or rather triple culture of the Russian people, building a democratic, legal society and state in Russia is impossible <...>. Today, Russia is on the path to democratization, and I think this path will end in democratization being stopped and swept away "(V. Hanan, Russkaya Perestroika, 1990).

"There is no special mission in Russia and there never was!" <...> It is impossible to seek the return of a single ideology, because a single ideology will sooner or later lead to the fascism" (Dmitry Likhachev - Soviet and Russian philologist, historian, textologist, academician of the USSR Academy of Sciences, then RAS).

The scientist was right. Today we can talk about the transformation of the classical European fascism in the middle of the XX century into its degenerate Russian form – racism-russism.

Racism is a cancerous tumor for humanity, a parasite of the civilization.

Dzhokhar Dudayev, the first president of the Chechen Republic of Ichkeriya, gave the most precise definition of this Eurasian movement: "Racism is a special form of the misanthropic ideology based on the great-power chauvinism, full of spirituality and immorality. It differs from the known forms of fascism, racism, nationalism, and special cruelty to both man and nature. The principle of action – the destruction of everything, tactics of the scorched earth. Distinguished by the schizophrenic form of mania of the world domination. Possessing the slavish psychology, it parasitizes on the false history, in the occupied territories and oppressed peoples. Racism is characterized by the constant political, legal and ideological terrorism. "

The war against Ukraine launched by Putin and his allies fully confirms the conclusion of Dzhokhar Dudayev. Today, "militarism, aggressive xenophobia, imperialism and the justification of terror against anyone who disagrees with it, not only inside the country but also abroad, have finally become a state ideology" (Fyodor Krasheninnikov, Deutsche Welle).

Indeed. On March 15, 2022, Alexander Dugin, a man who for decades was formed as a theorist and practitioner of the Russian fascism, who in his writings argued that Russia was called to create a world empire and thus save the world from the Western materialism and pragmatism, was appointed the Director General of the Russia's main state TV channel. Dugin is the author of the false Putin ideology about the "victory of neo-Nazism" in Ukraine in 2014. "For me, this appointment (General Director of the TV channel – O.R.) was a pleasant surprise. I am a faithful son of Russia and the Russian people, who have now finally begun to wake up. My front is an information war. I will expel the whole Russophobic element from the state, all these liberals, comedians, and I will put an end to the stench and senseless shows once and for all", Dugin said.

It is worth remembering that in 2015, when Russia was already waging war in the Ukrainian Donbass, A. Dugin, who then headed the department of the Moscow Mykhail Lomonosov State University, publicly encouraged the Russian authorities: "Ukrainians must be killed, killed, killed - as Professor, I think so": (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=DgHiqVy79Zs>).

Dugin strongly asserts in the minds of his students the idea that people from other countries are inferior from birth. They can't even understand it because they were born in a certain place, and this place, according to Dugin, distorts their views on life. To justify his fascist misanthropic theories, he even uses the arguments of quantum physics. More information on the Anticor portal: https://antikor.com.ua/articles/58530-dugin_ukraintsev_nuhno_ubivatj_ubivatj_i_ubivatj

In 2015, the American conservative journalist and writer Glenn Beck called Dugin's ideas and views truly terrible not only for people of Russia, but for the entire civilization, so the world is in real danger.

As you can see, he was absolutely right. Fascism has become the official ideology of Putin's Russia.

On November 6, 1993, during a meeting with the leaders of the constituent entities of the Russian Federation, Boris Yeltsin stated: "I am a supporter of the right of nations to self-determination ... except for the right to secede from Russia."

On July 11, 2016, in an interview with the German newspaper "Der Spiegel", Sergei Karaganov, an economist and political scientist and adviser to Vladimir Putin, said that Russia had "disrupted NATO's advance" by military aggression against Ukraine. And further: "We want the status of a great power, we want to get it back. We just can't give it up – 300 years have left their mark on our genes. We want to become the center of Greater Eurasia, a place of peace and cooperation. The European subcontinent will also belong to this Eurasia. "

And this is a fragment of a report delivered in 2017 by Sergei Baranov, an expert of the Electoral Club – an ultra-conservative, imbued with the imperial idea of a group of supporters of the Russian President Vladimir Putin:

"Today's Ukraine must be liquidated as a country, state and economy. This should be done neatly, in a very modern way. All parties must be confronted with the fact of the historic end of Ukraine. The mechanism of such "depreciation" can be the elimination of the financial, economic, state and cultural base of the Ukrainian project by making it unprofitable, extremely burdensome and dangerous for its participants, especially for the top in the face of the anti-system. Ukrainian ethnicity, which tends to become a nation at the expense of the Russians, must be demobilized, neutralized, driven to its ancient territory, deprived of its sting in the form of paramilitary state fascism. The partition of Ukraine and purification in parts is the only reasonable willful choice. The Russian regions of the southeast and part of the center-left center are to form a federation of republics in alliance with Russia called Novorossiia-Malorossiia, which will declare itself the successor to the USSR and Ukraine. Without the southeast, the center and west of Ukraine will lose the opportunity to support the economy and the state, lose initiative, plunge into depression. But Russia must continue to fight for the center and the West by creating and supporting various parties and forces that identify with the Russian world and its values. "

On November 22 of the same year, in the program "Vremya Pokazhet" on the Moscow propaganda television "First Channel", Deputy Speaker of the State Duma of Russia Petro Tolstoy said that "Ukraine was, is and will be ours."

The same idea was published three decades ago by the scandalous Vladimir Zhirinovsky in the newspaper "Le Monde" on September 29, 1992: "The most important thing is the restoration of the Russian Empire on its main borders, ie on the borders of the Soviet Union. It is enough to establish a strong government in Moscow, to leave the separatist republics in a mutually destructive struggle, as is the case in the Caucasus, after which they will simply line up to ask for access to the state of the Russian province. This is what will happen to the Baltics and also to the Ukrainians. As for the latter, Moscow should start by demanding the secession of the entire east of Ukraine, where 12 million Russians live. "

This imperial thought has a long history. Thus, Adrian Kopystyansky, historian and geographer, in his program work "Is it possible to separate Ukraine from Russia?", published in 1917 in Rostov-on-Don, stated: "All Great Russians know very well that Little Russia or Ukraine from the Carpathians to the Caucasus with fertile chernozem, with a rich Donetsk basin, with a dense population and access to the Black Sea can perfectly exist as an independent state without Great Russia. And the latter, with its population of 80 million, driven to Siberia and the tundra, cut off from the Black Sea and pressed to the shores of the Arctic Ocean, can not do without Little Russia".

That is why the Bolshevik Russia declared war on the Ukrainian People's Republic in December 1917. In 1919, the famous Ukrainian writer Volodymyr Vynnychenko wrote the drama "Between Two Forces". According to the plot, the Moscow Bolsheviks came to the large provincial Ukrainian city in early 1918. Panas Antonovich, the husband of the sister of the local Bolshevik Sofia, is having a hard time with the atmosphere of Russian chauvinism. Panas Antonovich deliberately resents the actions of the new government in Russian: "How not to go crazy, madam, how not to go crazy? You just look out the window: mountains of corpses of these damned Ukrainians. Mountains, madam, do you understand that? Boys, children, the elderly. To the wall - and you're done. The mustache recognizes the counterrevolution. Little Russian mustache - and to the wall. And how can you not be reverent in front of you, how can you not ... go crazy? Ha? After all, it is clear that socialism has come, and not some rotten, European, but Bolshevik, Russian, the real thing".

In a conversation with Bolshevik Commissar Sorokin, Sofia asks: "Do you call schools and textbooks nationalism?" Sorokin replied: "I call nationalism everything that divides one nation. None of your Ukraine has been, is not and will not be. All this is bourgeois-intelligent sentimental nonsense, which I will fight ruthlessly. "

Putin's thugs are currently waging a brutal, unconventional war against Ukraine. As a hundred years ago, a Moscow soldier "fights mercilessly" against Ukrainians, looting, barbarically destroying towns and villages, insidiously killing women and children, and destroying cultural and historical monuments.

Dehumanized immoral beings who see no connection with reality are currently at war with Ukrainians. These inhumans' ability to understand something appears when they are defeated and taken into the prison.

"The meanness of the Bolshevik system was especially evident in the war. Just as the most honest and intelligent people were executed in peacetime, the same thing happened at the front, but in an even more outspoken and abominable form. The most honest people who felt their responsibility to society died. I think this selection of the Russian people is a time bomb. It will explode in a few generations in the 21st or 22nd century, when the mass of garbage selected and nurtured by the Bolsheviks will give birth to a new generation of its own kind. "

This prediction of Nikolai Nikulin - art critic, professor, corresponding member of the Russian Academy of Arts, a veteran of World War II, which he published in his "Memoirs of the War", came true. Today, a generation of Russian scum and scoundrels are fighting against Ukraine.

Civilizational parasite

Most modern Russians still don't possess any logical thinking. They confuse imaginary, hypothetical reality with the actual state of affairs - the status quo. They are fighting the consequences, instead of eliminating the causes.

A little history. The teaching of logic in the Russian Empire began only in 1866, when Tolstoy became a Minister of Education. The October coup of 1917 marked the elimination of a small old elite capable of logical thinking. By throwing out Georgy Chelpanov's famous textbook on logic, an important tool for teaching correct thinking, the Bolsheviks doomed generations of Soviet people to inferiority. They were gradually turned into "sovok" (Soviet citizen – O.R.). And they have achieved considerable success in this process.

As an "effective manager," according to Vladimir Putin, Joseph Stalin realized that the shootings and the Gulag system of the socialist construction would fail and that the country needed effective rulers.

Calling the Moscow University professor Valentin Asmus to the Kremlin, Stalin complained to the philosopher that his commissars "could not think," so it was necessary to organize logic courses for red managers at various levels.

After the end of the war, noticing at a meeting of the Council of Ministers that members of the government could not hear each other precisely because of their inability to construct intelligible constructions, the Generalissimo initiated the return of logic to schools.

On this occasion, the Central Committee of the CPSU (b) on December 3, 1946, even adopted a special resolution "On the teaching of logic and psychology in high school." It declared it abnormal that logic and psychology were not studied in secondary schools, so it was decided to introduce the teaching of these subjects in all schools of the Soviet Union.

After the death of "the friend and leader of all nations," after a fierce intra-Kremlin struggle for the communist power, the USSR was led by Nikita Khrushchev, who was revolutionary in his criticism of such "bourgeois" sciences as logic and psychology. So in 1959 the teaching of logic in high school was abolished. She was excluded from the most university curricula.

Of course, it is wrong to say that the absence of this subject in the school curriculum makes students mentally retarded. The science of methods of thinking in school is implicitly taught through mathematics, physics, chemistry and even literature, when students analyze the works they read without much enthusiasm. But it is extremely important to learn the basics of the formal logic because it is a kind of glue that binds knowledge. In other words, logic "teaches to learn".

Due to the lack of the correct thinking, a person is unable to clearly articulate an opinion, he is confused in his statements, he contradicts himself. It is said of such a person: "He cannot be understood, there is no logic in his reasoning."

This is very well manifested today, during the war, when Russian soldiers, middle-ranking commanders, generals, the highest command of the Armed Forces of the Russian Federation act ill-considered, illogical. They cannot give advice on the logical support of the army. Demonstrate a real logistical horror.

The problems of Muscovy-Russia are rooted in the past. Here is how the world-famous Russian historian and ethnologist Lev Gumilev describes Russia: "Russia is an independent superethnos that emerged 500 years later than the Western Europe, in the 14th century. We and Western Europeans have always felt this difference and did not recognize each other as "ours". If we are 500 years younger, no matter how we study the European experience, we will not be able to achieve the prosperity and customs of Europe. Our age and level of passion implies completely different imperatives of behavior».

"Every Mordovian, Zyrian, Tatar, having been baptized, became a Russian" (Lev Gumilev). This is how the ethnic chimera was created. And "where there is an ethnic chimera, the imposition of ethnic fields of different rhythms, antisystems appear" (Lev Gumilev).

Lev Gumilev introduced the concept of the ethnic anti-system, defining it as a systemic integrity of people with a negative worldview – a specific attitude to the material world, which is manifested in the desire to simplify systems, ie to reduce the density of system connections. In the end, the density of systemic ties is reduced to zero, which means the destruction of the system – whether state, landscape or ethnic group. The antisystem produces a common worldview for its members. For an anti-system, regardless of the specific ideology of its members, there is one unifying guideline: the denial of the real world as a complex and diverse system in the name of one or another abstract goal. Russia is a shining example of an ethnic anti-system.

Девушки в праздничных нарядах. Архангельская губа. Российская империя. 1910 г.

When the Ukrainian nation in the middle of the seventeenth century was going through a phase of self-organization, self-regulation (stage of formation of the Cossack state), the ethnic anti-system Muscovy invaded the territory of Ukraine. "Immeasurably more tragic is the situation in which a country experiencing a change in the stereotype of behavior (phase of ethnogenesis), gets not just another ethnic group, but already formed anti-systemic community" (Lev Gumilev).

Today, the racist anti-system has invaded the territory of the Ukrainian state. "Putin's Russia is an aggressive state, built on violence and ruled by an authoritarian military-police dictatorship. And anyone who is not ready to unconditionally condemn war and dictatorship, let alone try to justify them, is now an accomplice and accomplice in war crimes" (Fyodor Krasheninnikov, "Deutsche Welle").

"The national self-consciousness of Ukrainians developed on the basis of ethnographic differences, peculiarities of psyche, cultural aspirations and strata connecting Ukraine with Western Europe, and the historically formed way of life imbued with the spirit of democracy". These words belong to Volodymyr Vernadsky – naturalist, philosopher, founder of geochemistry, biogeochemistry and radiogeology, one of the founders and the first president of the Ukrainian Academy of Sciences. He wrote that on Ukrainians in 1915. Peculiarities of the Russian mentality were noticed at different times by representatives of different nations. This is convincingly reflected and recorded in numerous books, diaries, travel notes. Ukrainians, who described the north-eastern neighbor very accurately, were not left out either. Here are just a few examples of proverbs and sayings collected and arranged by Matthew Nomis: "Dad, the devil is climbing in to the house!" - "In vain, important that this is not a Muscovite"; "Perhaps the Muscovite will then stop stealing, as the devil prays to God"; "When the devil and the Muscovite stole something, forget it"; "The wolf was abducted, and the Muscovite stole the mare"; "Befriend a Muscovite, and keep a stone in your bosom"; "The Muscovite will then tell the truth as the devil prays"; "Not great is Muscovite, but terrible"; "Damn something in shoes, and even a Muscovite"; "Moscow is built on poverty and fed by poverty"; "Bov, bov on the Moscow lie!"

These aphoristic statements are by no means manifestations of xenophobia, but only a systematization (a kind of folk sociology) of a huge array of examples / facts / consequences of coexistence of Ukrainians with Muscovites over centuries and long-term observations of our ancestors on not the best manifestations of the "mysterious Russian soul".

These surprisingly accurate characteristics that Ukrainians have endowed with representatives of foreign ethnic anti-systems for centuries are now confirmed in the actions, deeds, and behavior of Putin's racists in Ukraine. they shamelessly lie to avoid punishment for their atrocities. They do not have the slightest signs of morality, compassion. The "deep people" appeared before the civilized world in all its degenerate "beauty". The General Staff of the Armed Forces of Ukraine notes that the "second army in the world" is a sham. In fact, the armed forces of the Russian Federation are a gathering place for looters, useless people and war criminals.

From the telephone conversations of the occupiers with their families in Russia, which were repeatedly intercepted by the Security Service of Ukraine and then published in the Internet, it is possible (not even for a psychologist or psychiatrist) to understand that it is impossible to re-educate, to convert to human likeness the zombies branded with the latin letter "Z". They openly demonstrate the worst traits of degenerate members of the human population. These are real savages, cannibals who pretend to be people. They are constantly lying. And relentlessly commit crimes. The SBU has released excerpts from intercepted telephone conversations of the Russian military, in which they tell relatives that they rape minors and eat dogs. Russian fascism (racism) is truly something incomprehensible, ugly, , false, insidious, dirty, smelly, illogical, senseless, cynical, angry, bloody...

According to the eminent Russian historian Vasily Klyuchevsky, since the XVII century the Russian society (native) began to be influenced by foreign culture, rich in experience and knowledge, "exciting Russian people, confusing their concepts and habits, complicating their lives, giving him increased nervous movement." And "complicating Russian life with the influx of new concepts and interests, producing ferment in the mind ...". The modern Russian society still has problems that the historian once pointed out: "Some consequences of the Western influence show that the question is in the way it is perceived, not in its content."

The famous Russian physiologist Ivan Pavlov, quoted in the early twentieth century, pointed out that the Russian man's mind avoids meticulous analysis of the real world, but prefers to say: "In general, I must express my sad view of the Russian man. The Russian man has such a weak brain system that he is unable to perceive reality as such. There are only words for him. His "conditioned" reflexes are coordinated not with reality, but with words. "

This conclusion is confirmed in the actions of the modern Putin's Russia. The fact is that the workings of the human brain are characterized by reactivity mechanisms for the perception of new information. In the process of gaining experience, a certain compatible information array is formed in it. With age, closer ties and perceptions of the world around you develop. The stronger these ties, the more likely the conflict is – traditional ideas can only be refuted by the new information. It is about the conservatism of thinking not only of individuals but also of the society. Thus, the vast majority of Russian citizens perceive Putin's propaganda as dogma, as the ultimate truth – for example, believes in the so-called "Russian world", fueled by Orthodox fundamentalism, Slavophilism and Stalinism, always demonstrates aggressive beliefs. In the end, instead of thinking and analyzing, it is easier to abandon the new information than to destroy established dogmas and concepts. But to lose faith in Russia's "greatness and goodness", in its "high purpose", in particular in saving the "fraternal people" from aggressive NATO, is to lose faith in something fundamental, almost divine and thus ruin one's life. In fact, it is "induced psychosis", when a sick person produces delusions, and the rest of the people who are under the influence, perceive these ideas as true, <...> if the Russians take away "their truth", then all defense mechanisms (repression, denial) they will break and then they will have to face the truth that the psyche cannot stand "(Katerina Gabriel, psychologist).

In Aesop's fable "The Wolf and the Lamb", Wolf wanted to find at least some reason to eat the Lamb. To do this, he began to accuse him of non-existent sins. The current Kremlin dictator, an unprecedented personification of hypocrisy, cruelty, shamelessness, force and brutal power in the modern history, did the same as the Aesopian Wolf, eagerly seeking a casus belli for Ukraine, demonstrating far-fetched arguments and facts to his compatriots and the world.

Here are the statements of the well-known Russian sociologists L. Gudkov and B. Dubin from the Center for the Study of Public Opinion: "The inhabitants of Russia are archaic and primitive people. The workers are drunkards and thieves who do not want to work honestly and intensively and constantly complain about low wages. They lack motivation, they are not capable of creativity... Russians are passive and resist change. <...> The cultural level of Russians is extremely low. Residents of Russia suffer from an inferiority complex and are distinguished by pessimism. They don't love and don't respect themselves... We seem to be stuck psychologically and mentally on the threshold of the modern world.<...> And to all the challenges associated with globalization, migration and the invasion of other faiths, the public reacts stupidly: beat, evict, drive into the ghetto, "let them know who is the boss in the house!", Slid into zoological, cave racism. Power can be changed. Laws can be rewritten. The structure of the brain is much more difficult to change. And the consequences of degradation in this area can – alas – be fatal for Russia."

In this context, the conclusions / observations of Vasyl Klyuchevsky, who noted that for two hundred years the class of the Russian society, nurtured by the influence of the Western Europe, has repeatedly experienced strange crises: "...that we are not far behind at all, but we are going our own way, that Russia is on its own, and Europe is on its own, and we can do without its sciences and arts with our own home-grown means. This influx of patriotism and longing for identity so fascinates our society that we, of course, quite incomprehensible fans of Europe, are beginning to feel some resentment against everything European and are concerned about the unconscious faith in the immeasurable strength of our people.

Racism against Ukraine

After Putin announced the launch of a “special operation” by the Russian armed forces on the Ukrainian territory, "the majority of the population (Russians) had a disability for critical thinking, that is, the ability to self-assess information provided on behalf of Kremlin, and its filtering with the subsequent division into plausible and implausible. Conversely, a block was placed in the mind to perceive any, even the most reliable and seemingly plausible alternative information from other sources. The result is a phenomenon of streaming consciousness, when mythologies produced and distributed by the Kremlin, without encountering critical resistance, are immediately embedded in the mass consciousness and then broadcast in millions of copies, merging into a single endless stream "(Vladimir Pastukhov, University of London, PhD). .

Today, these views are illustrated by the Russian TV propaganda in the person of its odious representatives – Olga Skabееva, Dmitry Kiselyov, who cynically deny the war in Ukraine, where Russian troops are brutally killing civilians. Moreover, the scandalous TV presenter Vladimir Solovyov openly threatens the world: "If you think that we will stop in Ukraine – think 300 times. Let me remind you that Ukraine is only an intermediate stage in ensuring the strategic security of the Russian Federation."

The Russian State Duma deputy Oleksiy Zhuravlyov says that talks between Ukraine and Russia do not "produce the desired effect" on those people who are ready to fight for "Russian peace." According to him, the war should not be stopped until Russian troops "reach the border with Poland."

The bacilli of chauvinism and fascism affected Russian politicians, journalists, the military, ordinary citizens – a poll conducted on March 24-30 by the Russian sociological agency “Levada Center” found that after the full-scale Russian invasion of Ukraine on February 24, the Russian support for Russian President Vladimir Putin increased to 83%. It follows that the Russian fascism is a threat to all mankind.

On February 19, 2019, the Permanent Representative of Ukraine to the UNO Serhiy Kyslytsia asked Russian envoy Vasyl Nebenza "Do Russians Want War", quoting a fragment of Yevhen Yevtushenko's famous poem "Whether the Russians Want the War?". Composed later on music, he flew around the world with a song.

In 1961, the Soviet poet asked rhetorical questions. Like, do the Russians want a war:

Do Russians want the war?

Ask you the silence

Over the expanse of arable land and fields

And the birches and poplars

Ask those soldiers

Who lay under the birches

And their sons will answer you

Do the Russians want

Do the Russians want

Do the Russians want the war!

But a lot has changed since then...

"The first month of the war showed that the years of conspiracy, xenophobia and militarism were not in vain for many Russian citizens. Accustomed to seeing the world in a crooked mirror of the state propaganda, the Russians readily agreed to view war as peace, aggression against a neighboring country as its liberation from the Nazis, and horrific footage of war-torn cities and its victims as fabrications to discredit the Russian army and its Commander-in-Chief "(Fyodor Krasheninnikov, "Deutsche Welle").

Nowadays, in the Russian segment of the World Wide Web, you can hear and see the "polite lyrics" of the Russian "green men" on YouTube. One example of such "songwriting" in the line translation:

"Long-launched missiles,
And the ashes hung in the sky.

Burning New York and San Francisco,
And the state of New Mexico is on fire.

On the blackened beach of Miami
Guess the fish inflicted.
A giant tsunami has passed
And the Cordilleras shook.

To the lawn near the White House
A Russian soldier approached.
He sat on a marble column,

I put a machine gun next to it...

It is pointless to explain something to a society suffering from racism, to prove something to chauvinist imperialists, to convince them of something, to cite facts and arguments. Because, as before, the current Russian society is not able to produce any qualitative meanings in literature, theater or music.

"Russian culture is a product of the age-old totalitarian system. Therefore, it is a constant natural environment for the ideas of totalitarianism and racism. It is socially dangerous for any democratic society. We have never had anything to learn in this culture before – there is nothing to do today – we will emphasize it once again"
(Alexander Borgard, Professor. Donetsk, 1994)

A state that does not enjoy authority in a world, that is declining and collapsing cannot create something of value. "Russia has already completed its historic cycle. It went mad and hung itself on the imperial shroud, spreading the stinking spirit of the dead "(Alexander Sotnik, Russian journalist).

On YouTube you can watch a very eloquent fragment of the film "Perestroika" (1989) "Prince Luck Andreevich", where the famous Russian actor Armen Dzhigarkhanyan (Soviet, Russian and Armenian actor, theater director and teacher, People's Artist of the USSR, Honorary Citizen of Yerevan) played the role of the music teacher Kastoriev, who delivered an instructive monologue – the bitter truth about the Russian language and Russian culture: "There is no Russian language. There are very few Russian words in the Russian language. Soldier, revolution, radio, TV – these are not Russian words. But bad words, all sorts of rudeness – this is a typically Russian phenomenon. By the way, boor ("kham" – O. R.) is also not a Russian word. However, rudeness is a typically Russian phenomenon... Who are Russians and where did they come from? It is unclear. After all, there were Tatars, there were Vikings, Mordovians, Cheremis and a compote-cocktail came out. By the way, compote and cocktail are also not Russian words... What do you want if the Russian hero of their fairy tales is Ivan-the-Fool. Imagine a whole nation inventing a fool as a hero... This is stupidity. We don't value talent, we don't have any culture. "

Today, Putin's Russia, its so-called elite, is showing the racist messianism to the world. And they will never be able to "join humanity" (Peter Chaadaev, Russian philosopher).

The world needs to realize whom it is dealing with. The reputation of the Russians as "difficult", "bottomless", "highly spiritual", "incomprehensible", "subtle", "insisted on a special culture" must be done away forever. At least for a century. Because in fact it is a civilization parasite. European leaders (and not only) must finally understand that Russians, Russen, les Russes, rusos are the embodiment of lawlessness, malice, theft, rudeness.

"...Sooner or later, Weimar politicians who agree to politely ask the West for help are being replaced by other leaders who are trying to take everything they need by force. <...> And then Europe writhes and dies from the unthinkable humiliation under the boots of the new rulers who bring it a new Middle Age. And now the nuclear blackmail will be added to everything. And all dreams of peace and prosperity will come to naught. For the inability to make the right choice in time the West will have to pay. Not money, not political efforts and intellectual mobilization, but tens of millions of young lives. This is what threatens the world Weimar situation in Russia" (Alexander Yanov).

A well-known Los Angeles Times journalist, Russian citizen Serhiy Loiko, who came to defend Ukraine from the Russian occupiers, said: "We are fighting here not only for Ukraine, not only for its independence, not only for Ukrainians and their loved ones. We are fighting here for you, for the whole world, because this is the beginning of the Third World War. Here we have a wonderful overture to the Third World War. Therefore, the curtain may not close, and the first action will begin at any moment."

This Russian-Ukrainian war is a war without rules on the part of the racists. In it (a kind of divine embodiment of the war as in ancient Greek mythology – polemos) compromise is impossible. There is no rational limit to the violence that the aggressors viciously use against civilians. Because the army of racists, devoid of common sense, is set up for the total destruction of the bearers of the Ukrainian identity.

"In this existential duel of good and evil, light and darkness, freedom and despotism, truth and falsehood, life and death, one cannot come together somewhere in the middle. Because this is not a war abroad – this is a war of antagonistic worlds. First of all, of the worldviews. Which cannot coexist ” (Gennady Druzenko, lawyer, volunteer, anti-terrorist operation veteran).

In 1931, Oleksandr Oles wrote the program poem "Remember":

When Ukraine fought for the right to life,
When it fought with the executioners, lived and died,
And it waited, it just wanted sympathy,
Europe was silent.

When Ukraine in an unequal struggle
Was bleeding and shedding tears,
And it was waiting for friendly help,
Europe was silent.

When Ukraine was under the iron yoke
It worked for the master and plowed in the wounds,

When even the dumb rocks moved,
Europe was silent.

When in Ukraine there was a bloody harvest
Gathered for the executioner, Ukraine died itself,
And out of hunger it even lost its words,
Europe was silent.

When Ukraine cursed the life
And became the grave itself,
When even there were the tears in the eyes of the demon of evil,
Europe was silent.

Eight decades later, Sergei Borshchevsky, a diplomat and writer appealed to Western partners:

To the Western partners

When your Paris and Berlin
Will be trampled by the horde,
Remember the crucifixion of Ukraine,
Which begged you: "Please, Help!"

Unable to escape the onslaught,
Their countries surrendering the hordes,
Remember how you sympathized then,
How worried then you were.

As prompted to negotiate
With those who should be in the prison,
Taught us after three famines
And several centuries in the Moscow yoke.

When Putin's brutal soldiers
To show you their power,
Will rape your beloved women,
And will spit the cobblestones of your streets.

And they will shoot you with a machine gun,
And they will kill everything and everyone in the toilets,
And your children will speak with a mat,
Thoughtlessly borrowed from them,

Remember everything: how the heroes died,
How Donbas shed blood and burned ...
And we only asked you for weapons,
To protect yourself and ourselves.

Today Ukraine saves all nations
From the Moscow plague.
Help stop the hordes of predators,
Because together we are millions against darkness!

Sergey BORSCHEVSKY, diplomat, writer

Unfortunately, despite the war against Ukraine, which was begun by the "fraternal people", the world still cannot fully understand what the current Russian Federation is. In the information age, it is difficult to realize that this is a civilization parasite. Insidious, predatory, immoral, aggressive. Not all Western politicians are unanimous in recognizing that there is no point in engaging in dialogue with barbarians. Finlandization will not pass in Ukraine. Only UKRAINIZATION is possible. Any truce with racists who kill women and children and destroy critical infrastructure in cities and villages is a betrayal. One can only hope that a change in the consciousness of both the world establishment and ordinary citizens on planet Earth will happen as soon as possible, and they will all understand that there is no need to discuss the gas and oil embargo for Russia, there is no need to argue or sharply argue about providing Ukraine with an effective anti-missile weapons and increasing humanitarian aid. Such steps should be taken automatically.

"We must help Ukrainians defend their country as soon as possible. Our days are their hours, our weeks are their days; they need weapons here and now.... Russia is a big country, a big country with a lot of goods, raw materials, resources... They have a big army. Therefore, they can regroup and reorganize again and again" (Mateusz Morawiecki, Prime Minister of Poland).

Good and right words, good thoughts, reasonable warnings. Conclusion: Western countries urgently need to adopt a law on land lease, which would allow Ukraine to supply ammunition, weapons, including anti-tank and anti-aircraft systems, fighters, food. At one time (in March 1941) such a law was passed by the United States Congress. The clients of the United States were Great Britain, the USSR and the Commonwealth. Ukrainians need to be patient? ..

P.S.

On the eve of the Munich Security Conference on February 14, 2020, a number of Ukrainian politicians, scientists, writers, journalists and the military appealed to the President of Ukraine to raise with the US leadership Ukraine's special status as a major ally of the United States (<https://universum.lviv.ua/data/magarticles/files/2719.pdf>). Unfortunately, the necessary steps have not been taken by the top Ukrainian leadership.

Last year, on the third day after the inauguration of the 46th President of the United States, Volodymyr Zelensky gave an interview to Axios on HBO, in which he expressed a rather controversial opinion: "I have a very simple question: Mr. President, why are we still not in NATO?"

There is no doubt that if Ukraine had been granted a MAP in Bucharest in 2008 and then full membership in NATO, the Russian invasion would not have taken place. Is Ukraine less democratic and less reliable than Turkey, which is a military member of the Alliance?

Today, 18 non-NATO countries have the status of the major US allies. On August 1, 2019, Donald Trump granted this status to Brazil. The special status of the main ally of the United States would significantly strengthen Ukraine's position in its intention to join NATO, and at the same time would strengthen the importance of the Ukrainian state in the international arena. In this interview, Volodymyr Zelensky for some reason did not mention that since 2014 Ukraine is one of the three candidate countries for the status of the main non-NATO ally ("Major Non-NATO Ally"), which is also claimed Georgia and Moldova, which at one time, like Ukraine, were victims of aggression and also temporarily lost parts of their territories. Granting such status would be a logical step on the part of the United States as a guarantor state under the Budapest Memorandum.

On March 3-4, 2021, the 12th Annual US-Ukraine Security Dialogue was held, entitled "Disclosure of the new administration's approach to the most pressing security issues in Ukraine." In the chat of this online webinar, I asked about the prospects of Ukraine receiving the status of Major Non-NATO Ally. He was immediately responded to by Bill Taylor, US Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to Ukraine (2006-2009), Chargé d'Affaires of the United States in Ukraine (2019-2020), noting the relevance of the topic. He stressed that everything depends on the US government.

During a discussion at the Kyiv Security Forum on March 10, Bill Taylor stated: “We can give Ukraine the status of a major, non-NATO ally. We do not need the consent of other countries for this. Ukraine must ask for this and the United States can grant such a status” (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-lO4QovvvB0>).

When it will happen?
